Colour-coded Cleaning System

A range of colour-coded cleaning equipment designed to raise cleaning standards, preventing cross-contamination by helping to provide a clean and safe working environment.

While no compulsory standards exist for colour coding, the guidance offered here is supported by the British Institute of Cleaning Science and complies with all existing EU food hygiene regulations.

RED	Sanitary Appliances and Washroom Floors
BLUE	General Lower Risk Areas (excluding food areas)
GREEN	General Food and Bar Use
YELLOW	Washbasins and Other Washroom Surfaces

Hand Hygiene in the Workplace

- One in five people do not wash their hands when they visit the washroom
- Of those that do, only 30% use soap, water alone does not clean hands effectively
- Hands are the main vehicle for transmitting germs
- Help improve hand hygiene around the workplace and minimise the risk of germ transfer by placing hand sanitiser at "germ transfer hotspots" outside the washroom

Using colour codes for hygiene

Colour coding is based on the idea of designating particular cleaning products and processes to consistent colour schemes. It's purpose is to segregate equipment and procedures in order to prevent cross contamination in the home and workplace.

1. Make Colour Coding part of your employee induction training and continuous training programme.
2. Monitor the colour coding system on an ongoing basis to make sure it remains effective.
3. Always start in the cleanest, least contaminated area leaving washrooms until last.
4. Colour coded products include Mops, Buckets, Cloths, Brushes, Squeegees, Dustpans, Aprons, Bins, Bin Bags, Micro Fibre Dusters etc.

Follow the 'Golden Rules' below to use colour coding successfully and help protect human health.
